Times have certainly changed and, above all, this European capital is nowadays highly regarded for the spicy and energetic nightlife in Bucharest. Once the sun sets, this dynamic city transforms and is able to offer a multitude of leisure and entertainment opportunities to suit all tastes and preferences. Of course, it is virtually impossible to list all the bars and clubs that this city has placed on its vibrant streets. Make no mistake, spend a cultural evening at the opera or theater does not disappoint. However, Bucharest is becoming a hub for newer generations eager to experience chills and nocturnal emotions. Whether you want to party until dawn, listen to live music, celebrate your holiday like a king or just drink a decent drink to calm your soul, head to Bucharest City Center, where all the commotion happens. Under the cover of darkness, this area becomes a magnet for partygoers, and its nocturnal vibration is not at all contagious. What makes Bucharest so magnetic? As well as being fashionable, sexy and open-hearted, a wonderful thing about Bucharest is that it is available for all budgets. Clubs, bars, and restaurants are not so expensive compared to Western standards, regardless of the fact that tourists are slightly above the average mark prices. If you are going on a generous trip to Romania, you will be amazed at how accessible everything is as you immerse yourself in the festive spirit of the nation's capital. These people sure know how to celebrate life, there are two ways about it. Another major asset of Bucharest are women. It's hard not to notice them! Girls in Romania have a reputation for beauty and a desire to meet and greet foreigners. Also, weekends are on fire in this city! Its historic centre is home to many bars and clubs where guests are pampered. If you want to find the most popular sites, consult the city centre, especially between Union Square and Gabroveni, Selari and Lipskani streets. Everything is within walking distance of each other and most of the units are open day and night at your convenience. On the other hand, if you have charisma and like to meet new people, you can always tag with the locals and discover entertainment places hidden by tourist maps. Bucharest is full of hidden gems and rewards the adventurous and prefers to explore outside the touristically landscaped areas. Some clubs require the payment of a while others have a free entry policy for girls. However, as mentioned above, prices are not so high, so the fee is usually less than 5 Euro (unless there is a trend of Romanian pop star or performing band). However, don't forget to change your money to Romanian known as LEI or RON. Drinks are also quite cheap. A pint of beer will usually cost somewhere between 2 to 4 euros while a proper cocktail will involve spending 4 or 6 euros, depending on your choice. Also, if you don't know any local in Bucarești who will take you out to dance and drink, stay in the historic centre, because it is, after all, the safest place for tourists not to get lost. Of course, no evening out to Bucharest would be complete without a wide range of restaurants to wine and dinner as royalty. If there's one thing Romanians are proud of, it's their cuisine. You can find plenty of quality places to try traditional cuisine for relatively cheap prices. The city is also well-known for its theatres, concert halls and the famous Therme Spa - the largest indoor spa in Eastern Europe, where you can enjoy saunas, hydro baths and all kinds of relaxing massages. Estimated party time The best action after dark in Bucharest does not even start until 22.00. Bars and clubs can stay open deep at night because there are no undergraduate scans. In fact, true clubbing starts after midnight and lasts until the sun is up (and then some). Applications are high for established restaurants and restaurants, so be sure to book your meal in advance, especially if you come as a group. Frankly, Bucharest is modernizing at a rapid pace, but you can still see its historical remains in its diverse architecture. Some streets are quite eclectic and posh, such as those of the Enlightenment era, while some distinctly reflect the nation's communist past, with its brutalist concrete structures and tree-lined boulevards. However, after Nicolae Ceaușescu's reign ended after the revolution, the city turned to its future capitalist. Nowadays, all sorts of themed bars and clubs popping out of nowhere all over the city, attracting deer, chickens, backpackers, and students from all over the world. This is where the East and West meet and the clash between the Balkans and the Middle East has brought phenomenal food and drink to the table. So without further ado, here are some of the best clubs and bars you should definitely visit during your vacation in Bucharest... Discos, clubs, and dance venues in Bucharest FACE CLUB (Free Press Square 3-5) - open on Fridays and Saturdays from 11 PM to 6 AM This is the new hip place for clubbers who love to party until dawn.
